DETAILED ACTION

This Office Action is in response to the Applicant's amendment filed September 25, 2003.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

It is not understood where the plurality of coding buttons are on the case; where in the case the first connector is formed; and where on the PCB the second connector is formed.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 4-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Oldendorf et al. (6,166,324) in view of Elliott (US 2003/0032486 A1).

As best understood, Oldendorf et al. teach a structure for packing/unpacking PCBs; a case 10 having an upper plate 30 and a lower plate 40; a PCB (not shown) disposed in the case between the upper and lower plates, an interface trough 32 formed on the case; first and second connectors 35 & 45 (Figures 1-2, cols. 3-5, lines 64-67, 1-67 and 1-8). However, Oldendorf et al. fail to teach a decoder, a controller and buttons. Elliot teaches a decoder, a controller 56 and buttons 84 (Figure 1A, pages 3-4, paragraphs [0046]-[0057]). In regard to claims 4-7 concerning storing secured data and a coding sequence; a closed loop monitored by the integrated circuit when the PCB is enclosed in the case; the integrated circuit destroys the secured data if the closed loop is opened without first pressing the coding button with a sequence identical to the coding sequence; a controller electrically connected to the decoder for activating the plurality of keys to punch the plurality of coding buttons; and a controller electrically connected to an interface device which is receivable in the interface trough for sending coding information to the integrated circuit, claims directed to apparatus must be distinguished from the prior art in terms of structure rather than function. In re Danly, 263 F.2d 844, 847, 120 USPQ 528, 531 (CCPA 1959). Apparatus claims cover what a device is, not what a device does. Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Bausch & Lomb Inc., 909 F.2d 1464, 1469, 15 USPQ2d 1525, 1528 (Fed. Cir, 1990). Since Oldendorf et al. and Elliott are from the same field of endeavor (encasing a PCB), the purpose disclosed by Elliott would have been recognized in the pertinent art of Oldendorf et al. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the structure for packing/unpacking PCBs of Oldendorf et al. by incorporating the encased PCB of Elliott to protect the data (abstract).

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 09-25-03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

In response to the remark on page 8, second and third paragraphs, page 9, first and second paragraphs, again claims directed to apparatus must be distinguished from the prior art in terms of structure rather than function. Apparatus claims cover what a device is, not what a device does. In response to the remarks concerning controller and buttons not carrying any security functions, the controller and buttons disclose security function in that the elements create a coding sequence to its integrated circuitry.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
